The 4-Stage Bottleneck Map

From Power Habits® by Dr. Noah St. John, Habit #7: Embrace Your Simplify System

After helping entrepreneurs and organizations for more than two decades, I've come to realize that most businesses are in one of four growth stages. And your bottlenecks are different at each stage.

Stage 1
Zero to six figures

Stage 2
Six to seven figures

Stage 3
Seven to eight figures

Stage 4
Eight figures and above

Going from zero to six figures, the bottlenecks can look like:

- Hiring your first employee (or independent contractor)
- Deciding where your workspace is
- Determining what you (the owner) should be doing and not doing
- Dealing with a lack of sales

Going from six to seven figures, they can include:

- Hiring a VP of marketing
- Deciding if you should open a second location
- Determining what you (the owner) should be doing and not doing
- Scaling your operation

And so on, all the way from seven to eight figures and beyond, including how and when you want to exit the business.

Notice the one that shows up at every stage: what you, the owner, should be doing and not doing. That's the one the Bottleneck Reset works on.
