The Win Cubed Hand-Off Worksheet

From Power Habits® by Dr. Noah St. John, Habit #7: Embrace Your Simplify System

Years ago, when my books started to sell and I began to get booked on more stages, I started to get more emails. A lot more emails. Soon, more than half of my workday went to answering hundreds of them.

My business couldn't grow if I was the one writing the books, giving the keynotes, and answering every email. So email became my #1 bottleneck. Here's the simple exercise I used, and you can use it on the first decision you hand off.

> "Most people will do more for meaning than for money."
> Power Habits®

Step 1: Identify the bottlenecks in your business

Step 2: Choose the one to remove first

Step 3: Write your Win

What do you get to do with the time? (Mine: more time for the work that brought in money, like coaching and keynotes.)

Step 4: Write their Win

What does the person who takes it over get? Pay, yes. And remember, most people will do more for appreciation than for money.

Step 5: Write the World Win

What larger purpose does this serve? (Mine: helping more people eliminate not-enoughness.)

I Win, You Win, and the World Wins. Say all three out loud when you hand it off.
